MANY USES FOR FLOWERS.

"Still harping on my daughter," he said with a smile. "One thing I can tell you, no such reason has ever been urged by our firm. With any house that does such an extensive trade as we do you would be surprised to hear the variety of uses to which flowers may be put, and are invariably put, that would otherwise be thrown on our hands. Think of all the chartrable institutions there are no every man and the chartrable institutions there are no every man and the service which flowers may be put, and are invariably put, that would otherwise be thrown on our hands. Sometimes they name certain hospitals, but more generally it is left to pitals and places of that character, we believe, have got the first call, and to these we send them. Where there is a surplus after this we send them to the New-York, to Bellevue, and so on. "Where does New-York City's supply of flowers

"They are grown in the suburbs, in Jersey City, in Long Island, up the Hudson upon both anks, and in Staten Island. They are grown by men who have devoted years to the business and who have become specialists each in a different line. A man finds that he has a talent for growing violets, and in that particular branch of flor-iculture he becomes perfect. Another makes the cultivation of a particular variety of rose his specialty, and to this he will devote all his time. A man will get engrossed in the production of flow-ers grown from bulbs, such as hyacinths, lilies of the valley, narcissus, fresia, tulips, and so on. Others again are fond of producing old-fashioned flowers, such as stock, gillies, candytuft, forget-me-not, mignonette and sweet peas. Then there are carnation specialists, whose efforts are bent to the bringing as near perfection as possible this sweet-smelling and lovely looking flower, and last, but not least, the orchid growers, men who, having acquired a large collection of orchids, Note all their time thereafter to cultivating them." THE CULTIVATION OF ORCHIDS.

"Might you not have put orchids first?" "I might. Don't grow impatient. I have more to tell you about them. An orchid is an aristocratic flower, and I suppose this is the reason it is so tender and susceptible and perhaps unrelitransit-has to be handled with care. It is not a plant that you can come into a store and buy and carry off to your home, expecting it to bloom like these plants, but you cannot count upon all of them blooming; it would be safe to allow for the failure of a certain percentage. The plant belongs to a tropical clime, and it thrives best in a high emperature and a warm and moist atmosphere. are summer bloom varieties and winter bloom varieties; but the aim, generally speaking, of those who are devoted to winter bloom varieties; but the aim, generally speaking, of those who are devoted to flower culture and who take an especial pride in that department of the business to which the orchid belongs is to have this flower bloom in the winter, when it has the market so much to itself, and when there is such an increased and increasing demand for it. There is, of course, a demand for orchids all the year, yet owing to its high-class character, the care and trouble required in its cultivation, and its comparative scarcity, there is never an over-production. Curious as it may appear, it is only during the last seven or eight years that it has come into use so extensively."

"As to the season for the sale of flowers?"

"As to that," he replied, "it may be said, particularly in a city like New-York, among whose wealthy people the range of taste in the matter of floral decoration is so variable, that it never flags; the season exists the whole year around. There are periods when more flowers are used than others. I should say, however, that flowers are used more extensively in the winter than in summer. The reason we have noticed this is that in the winter people who purchase flowers are dependent for their supply almost wholly upon the flowers that are used are grown by these same people in their own gardens. You will note, however, when I say there is no particular season for flowers, I am speaking from a business point of view; that is to say, there is no particular season for flowers, I will tell you something additional. The relatives of some person who has died will come to us and say, I want a casket covered. It then, you see, becomes what I might call a concentrated offering of every member of the family. In filling an order of that character, we not alone cover the top of the casket, but we cover the sides as well. buttonhole? "Give us a flower, mister." "Hey, mister, give us a flower." It is a common experience to hear this demand in the streets of New-York, if you are so fortunate as to have a bouguet, or only a few flowers. The poor love flowers even more than the rich do.

Why is it that you see "Please omit flowers" in connection with the oblituary notice of some wealty person? The florists won't always tell you. There is little, in fact, that they will tell you about their business, except in a general way.

The opening of the new clubhouse of the E. B. Harper Republican League on Willis-ave, was one of the most successful Republican rallies which has been held recently in the Twenty-third Ward. The club has had a remarkably rapid growth, and has taken its place as one of the leading Republi-can organizations above the Harlem River. Hugh S. Gambel is president of the League. The speeches of ex-Judge Ernest Hall, James L. Wells, W. H. Ten Eyek and others at the opening exercises showed that the Republicans of the district are aroused to activity, and the addresses of J. Sabine Smith, J. M. Mayer and others, and the letters of encouragement from well-known Republicans

THE DOCTOR SAYS HIS WIFE IS INSANE.

At an early hour yesterday morning the police of the Twentieth Precinct, Brooklyn, were requested to quell a disturbance at the house of Dr. Fuchs, at No. 1,300 Greene-ave. Policeman Schnepf was sent to the house, and found the physician and his wife on the sidewalk in front of their home, surrounded by a crowd. The doctor was struggling with his wife to get her into the house. He told the officer that his wife was insane, and had aroused the neighbors by her screams. The woman refused to enter the house, and a charge of intoxication was made against her by the policeman. At the station house Mrs. Fuchs showed the effects of a severe heating. Both her cyes were black and her face and hands covered with bruises.

In the Ewen Street Police Court yesterday the prisoner's counsel, Frank Best, declared that her husband had been abusing her for years. Since he became a physician, four years ago, he said, he had often tried to have her consent to enter a hospital. She always protested against this, declaring that her health was good. On Friday night, it is slieged, he again asked her to go to a hospital, and a quarrel followed. He struck her, it is alleged, several times and then threw her into the gatter. The physician declared that his wife was an habitual drankard, and he asked to have an examination made to assertian the condition of her mind. She was held for examination. UNION CHURCH SERVICE AT FLATBUSH.

A union service of the church congregations of Flatbush and Flatlands with the societies of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League was held on Friday evening at the Diamond Street Baptist Church, of Flatbush. The church was crowded to the doors when the Rev. Henry J. Goeller, the new pastor of the church, opened the exercises. He ex-tended a cerdial greeting to all, and after a service of song addresses were made by the Rev. W. H. Boocock, pastor of Grace Reformed Church the Rev. J. S. Gardner, of Flatlands, and James A. Cruikshank, of Brooklyn.

The meeting, which represented every church in Flatbush except the Episcopal, closed with a consecration service, and gave to all who attended it a new impulse for Christian endeavor.
